

Impact Teacher Academy (ITA) Introduces New Common Core Professional Development Workshops

CompassLearning's Impact Teacher Academy has announced new Common Core Professional Development workshops to help educators prepare for the coming Common Core State Standards.

The focus of the workshops is on using Odyssey to create personalized learning paths for students that align with and ensure student understanding of Common Core State Standards in math, English/language arts, and writing. Additionally, the workshops are intended to help educators understand the major shifts taking place in teaching Common Core math, English/language arts, and writing in three segments: introductory, implementation, and evaluation.

"According to a recent report by the Center for American Progress, participation in high-quality, comprehensive professional development is essential for Common Core to fully succeed in a widespread and sustainable way," says Quannah Hopper, Vice President of Impact Teacher Academy. "The main questions we're currently getting on a consistent basis are, 'How do we best prepare for the transition to Common Core?' and, 'What can we expect?'"

"These workshops are specifically designed to help educators learn how to utilize our rigorous and engaging content and administrative features to be prepared for the transition and ensure students achieve the expected results by focusing on the new standards," continues Hopper. "We believe these workshops will make the switch to Common Core as smooth as it can possibly be and ensure widespread and sustainable success."
