The role of the board in today's Catholic school marketing and development/advancement efforts has never been more important. Board members throughout the country are finding that if their school is going to prevail and not just survive then they need to become more engaged than ever before, regardless of whether there is a full-time development director or not. In 2014 Catholic school leaders will need to be involved in strategic planning, in the annual Fund, serving as ambassadors and promoters for their Catholic schools, being part of major gift identification and cultivation, and rolling up their sleeves to make sure the capital campaign is successful.

This webinar will go through a list of areas where board members are needed in order for a Catholic school to soar.

This webinar will look at the importance of organization and preparation for a capital campaign, with or without a full-time development director. We will present a step-by-step path that will show Catholic school leaders the importance of making sure every "T" is crossed and every "I" is dotted. With campaigns needed today to raise seven- and eight-figure money for facilities, endowments, and key programs; this is an important time for Catholic schools to understand what goes into preparing and knowing when you are ready to kick off a capital campaign.
