

Calling all Middle School Religion Teachers!

Interested in tackling tough local issues with your students?

Attend a workshop on Juvenile Justice in King County!

The workshop will present a Religion Mini-Unit for Grades 6-8 that explores tough questions, such as:

- What is the current state of our Juvenile Justice System ?
- How are we called as Catholics to respond to the injustices of this system?
- How can we take action on the issue of juvenile justice to become more compassionate and engaged citizens?

Attend to receive training and free materials!

This unit and training are brought to you by four members of Seattle University's second Contemplative Leaders in Action (CLA) cohort. CLA is a leadership development program for Jesuit-educated young adults in their twenties and thirties who seek to unite faith, leadership, and justice in their personal and professional lives. The two-year program culminates with a small-group project meant to sustainably address a social injustice. This training was developed to fulfill this portion of the CLA program in hopes of meaningfully engaging young people with a justice issue of local importance.
