WELCOME BACK!

It is difficult to imagine that summer has once again flown past and a new school year is upon us. As the Washington Federation of Independent Schools begins its 41st year of advocacy, we want to wish each of you as school leaders a successful and learning filled year. Because WFIS is made up of schools from many diverse backgrounds and philosophical foundations, our membership has the broadest base of any organization representing private schools in our state, and in many cases, nationally. To that end, we strive to represent our schools as their advocate and voice in maintaining their independence from undo government regulation and intrusion.

We seek to partner with those in the public sector in order to provide equitable participation and equitable application of federal dollars for qualified private school students.

We actively support and sponsor programs designed to recognize and enhance professional instruction in Washington's private schools.

We continue to devote efforts in pursuit of educational choice for all children and their parents who desire to receive a world-class education in a private setting. We vigorously encourage visionary leadership and innovative forms of outstanding educational practice in our membership programs.

WFIS resources are always available to you, our state's private schools. Best wishes for an outstanding school year!

Why PNAIS Schools are also WFIS

Our thanks to Meade Thayer, Executive Director, Pacific Northwest Association of Independent Schools (PNAIS) for his recent encouragement to business managers:

"WFIS is the legislative lobbying group that represents all private schools in the state. It is important to be a member as WFIS helps keep all of us in the know about issues that might impact our independence. If the impact is negative, they help alert us as to the steps we can all take to counter the specific legislative initiative.

... So ... the relative small membership fee is well worth it ... as one means to help protect our independence!" (Emphasis added.)

May all Washington's private schools value and recognize the significance of their WFIS membership.

Private Schools Day 2010

October 19, 2010; 8:00-3:00

Location: Puget Sound ESD, Renton

WFIS and Puget Sound ESD are proud to again present this special all-day forum for private and independent schools in our region. Join other administrators, teachers, paraeducators, technology specialists, and interested parties from the preschool and K-12 educational community in hearing informative presentations by PSESD, Seattle Pacific University, and private school staff. A vendor showcase will also be on hand for you to browse services and support that are available to private schools at special discounts and rates.

Keep checking the following webpage - breakout session descriptions and vendor participation will be added soon:

Education Secretary Duncan Names Blue Ribbon Schools

U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan today announced the names of 304 schools identified by the U.S. Department of Education as the National Blue Ribbon Schools for 2010. Schools were selected either because they dramatically improved student performance on standardized tests in reading and math or because their test scores placed them in the top ten percent of schools in the nation or state.

Fifty private schools were among the awardees this year, the maximum

E-Rate Assistance

Robert Teegarden, a longtime private school administrator and public policy advocate, has become a senior consultant with E-Rate Program LLC. Teegarden will assist private schools in the western half of the United States with E-rate funding. He spent more than 21 years as a private school administrator on the West Coast. Teegarden says, "I understand the financial pressures faced by these institutions. That's why I am eager to help private schools receive their share of E-Rate dollars."

According to Teegarden, most private institutions don't have the time, staff, or experience to wade through the complicated filing process. With the help of his firm, Teegarden estimates that most schools will spend less than 2 hours on their E-Rate process. "E-Rate Program LLC understands every step of the filing process. We have the staff and expertise needed to maximize reimbursement and minimize the workload."

Topics include:

The Washington Federation of Independent Schools (WFIS) is the umbrella organization for private education in Washington State. With seventy percent of the independent student population enrolled in member schools, WFIS is the only statewide vehicle for regular communication and strategic development between the many different constituencies. WFIS schools are affiliates of the Catholic dioceses in the state; the Association of Christian Schools International (ACSI); the Christian Schools International (CSI); Lutheran Schools; Montessori schools; the Pacific Northwest Association of Independent Schools (PNAIS); the Seventh-day Adventist Schools (SDA); and numerous other religious and independent institutions, including the Waldorf Schools, Hutterian Brethren, and those institutions with sponsorship within the Jewish and Islamic communities. The WFIS Board of Directors consists of eighteen school heads representing the major constituencies chosen regionally by their respective bodies.

Keynote Speaker: Latoya Peterson

Social media is the new medium for a generation raised on Facebook, Twitter, and blogs. It has transformed the media landscape, disseminating events instantly via social connections. Writer, speaker, activist, Latoya Peterson considers herself to be an "edupunk." She is the editor of Racialicious, a bold blog where the intersection of race and pop culture meet. Challenging the media status quo with a "take no prisoners" fervor, Peterson constantly critiques the questionable media representations dependent on stereotypes. She represents the new generation of multicultural/diversity/social justice activists.
