Four Core Tenants:

Faith: Faith is the commitment we have to the exploration of our beliefs. We acknowledge the fundamental necessity of the human confrontation with faith in all its aspects—religious, interpersonal, political, social, in all the commitments required in a life—as a critical element in the pursuit of truth.

Reason: Reason means going beyond the mere productions of useful-skilled and employable graduates. It aims at producing thoughtful, educated, independent thinkers capable of, and interested in, making a positive difference in the world they inhabit.

Service: Service expresses essential elements of the Benedictine philosophy of hospitality. Saint Martin's nurtures the impulse to serve and aims to graduate men and women distinguished by their thoughtful commitment to help meet the needs of others.

Community: Community is a distinctive hallmark of the Benedictine philosophy that is the self-conscious regard for people's mutual inter-dependence and the way we embrace respect for all the roles in the human community.
